Practical Ideas and Strategies

As a Speech-Language Pathologist, your expertise in oral language and literacy skills makes you an invaluable member of the literacy team at your school. In this institute, MariBeth Plankers, an experienced Speech-Language Pathologist and Assistive Technology Professional, will share practical methods for assessing and treating reading and writing skills in students with language disorders. You will learn more effective, efficient and easy-to-implement techniques to identify children who struggle with decoding, reading comprehension and written language.

MariBeth will share with you evidence-based practice, from the ASHA evidence-based triangle, about the language skills that strongly predict learning deficits across settings and situations and provide strategies that will address these language skills in your daily therapy, whether it is online or in person. This institute will focus on practical strategies that can be implemented in the context of therapy, as well as utilized across settings and situations.

You will leave with numerous ideas for reading comprehension, writing, language, and games to assist your students with moderate to severe reading, writing and language deficits, as well as ways to maximize your effectiveness as an SLP in the school setting.

A Practical, Two-Day Institute Focused on the SLP's Role in Helping Students with Literacy and Communication Deficits

Plan to attend as a school or district team in a two-day institute that will address the needs of your students with practical assessment and intervention practices. Learn how to build on the success of your current program and expand your repertoire of skills and strategies. Time is of the essence and your use of time is valued as a practicing professional, identifying key components that have the greatest impact on student achievement and success. Leave equipped with assessment and intervention tools supported by evidence-based practices.

Develop a Plan to Structure Your SLP Program to Boost Expertise and Collaboration for Student Success with Literacy and Communication

Discover attributes of highly effective SLP programs and how you can incorporate them into your own program. During the two days, you will learn strategies to add to your repertoire of informal assessments and engaging interventions. Gain specific tips for students who present with unique needs and behaviors. You'll also receive an extensive digital resource handbook to help you implement all you learn when you return to your school district.

A Message From Institute Leader, MariBeth Plankers

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

MARIBETH PLANKERS is an outstanding national presenter and highly experienced Speech-Language Pathologist and Assistive Technology Professional. She brings years of school-based experience and ideas for improving outcomes for students who have language, reading and written language disorders. She has extensive experience providing literacy-based language therapy services within inclusive models and via teletherapy. In addition, she has experience working as a clinical service provider, diagnostician, and clinical supervisor within the university setting. MariBeth reflects a broad experience working with students of all ages, from early education through High School.

MariBeth is the author of Speech-Language Pathologists: Strategies to Support Students with Reading and Language Deficits (Grades PreK-12), the digital resource handbook each participant will receive. Join her for a fast-paced, engaging institute with practical, highly effective techniques you can use with the children you see and treat.

Dear Colleague:

For many years, I have taught students with language disorders leading to challenges in reading comprehension and writing and I can't imagine any skills that are more important to learn! With an educational background in the development of language, the SLP is equipped to be highly involved with reading and writing success of students. Over the years, our role as SLPs has expanded, and our expertise in language and literacy is now more recognized than ever before. An increasing number of schools are discovering the benefit of the practical approach to addressing literacy skills along with the oral language goals in the context of current therapy programs. In addition, the SLP also supports the work of teachers with effective strategies based on what we know about language and literacy.

I have developed this institute to share with you the best practices that we, as SLPs and other specialists, can use to support students with language and literacy deficits. We will explore the alignment of oral language and literacy skills and how valuable your expertise is to the school IEP team. We will explore the different types of reading challenges that your students with language disorders encounter across the curriculum. The emphasis will be on practical, doable methods to evaluate students and to develop individualized planned programs that may be implemented through direct intervention, the general education classroom, through distance learning, and consultation.

My goal for this institute is to send you and your team back to your school empowered with many new ideas you can put into practice immediately! We can lower the barriers in order to raise the level of success for our students.

Sincerely,

MariBeth Plankers, M.S. CCC-SLP, ATP

P.S. I know how valuable your time is, so my focus for the day will be on sharing practical strategies that work in today's schools with today's students.

"I have developed this institute to share with you the best practices that we, as SLPs and other specialists, can use to support students with language and literacy deficits."
