Practical Ideas and Strategies

There has been a marked increase in the diagnosis of our young students who have weaknesses in executive function skills. Common characteristics can include difficulty with task initiation, organization, cognitive flexibility, memory, emotional control and time management. In this NEW fast-paced seminar, Peggy Campbell-Rush will demonstrate how to recognize and assess the impact on behavior and learning and most importantly, give you a toolbox filled with practical strategies to help your Pre-K – 2nd Grade students with executive function difficulties. You will not want to miss this day filled with highly effective ideas and interventions to help your students become more independent and develop greater executive control of their time, tasks, and emotions.

A Message From Seminar Leader, Peggy Campbell-Rush

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

Award-winning educator PEGGY CAMPBELL-RUSH is proud to share her passion and expertise on the development and strengthening of executive function skills in Pre-K – 2nd grade students. As an international presenter and author of multiple professional books, Peggy synthesizes her decades of experience to bring to her audience the most authentic, practical, classroom-tested strategies. Peggy's extensive experience provides a practical perspective for working successfully with students who have executive function deficits. You will leave this seminar reenergized and better equipped to deal with students who exhibit behavioral problems, inattentiveness and learning difficulties due to the lack of executive function skills. As an added bonus you will receive an extensive digital resource handbook packed with ideas and resources you can use and share with your colleagues the very next day.

Dear Colleague:

Do you ever hear any of these statements about your students?

"She breaks down at the littlest thing."

"He zones out, and I have a hard time getting his attention back."

"He seems smart enough but cannot get started on a task."

"Her organization is all over the place, and really causes problems."

"He just cannot keep the information taught today to use tomorrow!"

If you have heard, voiced, or even just thought any of these, I invite you to join me for a fast-paced, strategy filled day focused on Executive Functioning Skills for Pre-K – 2nd Grade students. Pulling from my decades of experience, I have compiled a specific toolbox of strategies, ideas and solutions for the issues we see when our students lack strong executive function skills. As you know, developing and strengthening executive functioning skills early on is so important for school success. Lack of these skills plays a role in school struggles for years to come. This seminar will help you intervene early and often to help all students achieve school and lifelong success.

Over the past decade we have witnessed an explosion of diagnoses related to young students who have difficulties in executive functioning. In addition, many of our general education students who do not have a diagnosis exhibit a lack of executive function skills and the impact on their ability to learn effectively is all too real.

In this stimulating and interactive seminar, designed for Pre-K – 2nd Grade general education and inclusive settings, you will learn how to recognize executive functioning deficits, assess their impact on learning and behavior, gain a toolbox of practical strategies for working with students, and learn how to integrate these strategies into your classroom tomorrow and beyond.

Do not miss this opportunity to understand how executive functioning or dysfunction makes or breaks students' ability to be successful in school. Come and learn new strategies and interventions that will make a significant difference for all your students.

Sincerely,

Peggy Campbell-Rush

P.S. I know you have the choice in choosing a professional development day that will meet your needs for the year. I promise, you will not be disappointed! Get excited!

"...learn how to recognize executive functioning deficits, assess their impact on learning and behavior, and gain a toolbox of practical strategies..."
