A Message From Seminar Leader, Catherine Wilson

Uniquely Qualified Instructor

CATHERINE WILSON is an exceptional educator, consultant and national presenter, who is best known for her enthusiasm, engaging approach to sharing research-based methods and practical ideas for teaching students with special needs. She has a wealth of proven strategies to help you catch up your students with disabilities who have fallen behind. Catherine brings an extraordinary passion for meeting the needs of all students through universal design for learning, specially designed instruction and appropriate access and supports that shift the focus from student “disabilities” to student “abilities.” She is the author of Catching Up Your STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES Who Have Fallen Behind, the extensive digital resource handbook each participant will receive at the seminar.

Dear Colleague:

What an incredible time to be an educator! Regardless of what the last year has looked like for you, your school and your students; and regardless of the questions that still surround our work ... what we know for sure, is that what matters most is that we are still educators and that our students need us.

So, while yes, we are facing challenges like never before as we grapple with growing gaps in our students with disabilities’ academic achievement, we can do something about it. We can help catch up our students with disabilities who have fallen behind!

I have designed this seminar expressly to share the most impactful teaching tools to help you catch up your students with disabilities who have fallen behind. No matter your current teaching situation and configuration you will experience and learn highly effective and easy-to-implement strategies to help your students make the necessary gains. I have organized the most effective instructional practices for you in this seminar. My goal is that you leave with a number of terrific new strategies that will work best for you as you assist students who have fallen behind, helping them to be more successful in school and in life.

I look forward to showcasing practical ways to address the varied needs of your learners and to accelerate their progress. I want to empower both you and your students with disabilities to not merely survive, but to thrive despite all the challenges we face during this unprecedented time in education!

Sincerely,

Catherine Wilson

P.S. I guarantee you will leave my seminar with many outstanding strategies you can use to catch up students with disabilities across all grade levels and content areas and to address their diverse needs!

“You will experience and learn highly effective and easy-to-implement strategies to help your students make the necessary gains.”
